READING ACTIVITY

Part 1 – Read the excerpt and then do the activity below.

The story is told in the first person by the young vet, James Herriot.

One winter night in 1937, I was helping a cow to give birth<sup>1</sup>. I was lying next to the cow on a cold, dirty barn floor because it couldn't stand up. Snow was coming into the barn too, and falling on my back. The birth wasn't going well because the calf was in the wrong position<sup>2</sup> to be born. Again and again, I tried to turn the calf around. It was very hard work, but I couldn't have a rest. Some farmers were standing in the barn and watching...and they weren't helping.

'If it isn't born soon, it'll die,' one farmer said. I didn't need him to tell me that! 'The last vet had lots of experience.' And old man said, 'Births were easy for him. Are you new at this job?'

'Yes,' I answered. 'It's been seven months.'

The old man smiled<sup>3</sup>. 'The last vet knew what to do, alright,' he said. 'But you're having problems. You can't learn everything from books you know.'

Many Yorkshire farmers talked like this. They thought they knew more about animals than vets. But the old man was probably right: I did have a lot to learn. The year before, when I was studying at veterinary college, the teacher didn't tell us how difficult a vet's life can be. They didn't talk about getting up at 2 a.m. and driving miles in the snow, then walking over fields in the dark to work in a freezing<sup>4</sup> cold barn.

The young vet is now working for Siegfried at the veterinary surgery at Skeldale House.

The Yorkshire Dales did look wild<sup>1</sup> from up there on the hill. Big rocks<sup>2</sup> lay here and there, and there was dark mountain above us. But the air was fresh, and I could smell<sup>3</sup> the summer flowers. The birds were singing, and the river in the valley below was bright silver in the evening light. It felt great to be in the countryside after years in a big, dirty city. So I took the job immediately. But Siegfried was right—it wasn't easy to be a Yorkshire Dales vet! My first day in the job didn't start well. I went to a big farm to look at a horse, and Mr Soames, the farm manager, was waiting for me when I arrived. His first words were an angry 'You're late!' When I saw the horse, I knew that it was very ill. I looked at the animal carefully, then said, 'We can't do anything for this horse, Mr Soames. It's dying.' Soames was really angry when he heard that. 'This is a very expensive horse,' he said, 'It wins races, you know...and you say you can't do anything! That's not good enough!' 'I'm really sorry,' I said. And I was—it was a beautiful animal, but there was no way to help it. 'You're new and you don't know anything!' Soames said when I left. 'Siegfried is a good friend, and I'm going to talk to him about you. If you're wrong about that horse, you'll be sorry!'
